BLOOD DONATION

Students Shine Bright This Diwali through Selfless Blood Donation* This Diwali, three inspiring students from our institution - Soham Tare, Ayush Shinde, and Sarthi Sakharkar - embodied the true spirit of the festival of lights by donating blood to those in need. Their selfless act not only illuminates the path for others but also exemplifies the values of compassion, empathy, and community service. By giving the gift of life, they have brought hope and joy to patients and their families. *Wishing them a Bright and Joyous Diwali

Mr. Karambir Singh Kang

Legends of Hospitality

Legends of Hospitality The story of Karambir Singh Kang is one that stays with you. It's not just a tale of tragedy, but one of immense courage, resilience, and the unwavering spirit of hospitality. It's a story that deserves to be told. Karambir, as he's known to many, isn't your typical hospitality figure. He's a leader who has lived through unimaginable loss, a man who embodies the very essence of service and sacrifice. He was at the helm of the Taj group during one of its darkest hours, and today, he leads their efforts in the US, even representing the UN on issues of terrorism. But to understand his story, we have to go back to the night of 26/11, the night that changed everything. Karambir shared his memories of that horrific night: "It started like any other day. Team briefings, an event at 7:30 PM... then the calls started coming in around 9:15 PM. 'Gunshots at the hotel.' At first, I thought it was just some local trouble, but the calls kept coming, more and more urgent. I rushed back to find chaos. The media was already there, and inside the hotel, it was like a nightmare. Screams, the smell of explosives... it wasn't the Taj I knew. My staff told me the terrorists were inside, moving through the hotel, killing people, taking hostages." He described the frantic efforts to protect the guests, calling every room, urging them to turn off the lights, trying to get people out through back exits. And then, the personal horror: "I called my wife, Neeti. 'Don't come out,' I told her. 'Keep Samar and Uday close. Hide.' She just said, 'Karam, don't worry. We'll be okay.' That night... the gunshots never stopped. I was just reacting, trying to do what I could. Then, at 3:00 AM, I called her again. I started to say, 'I'm coming for you...' and then... gunshots. The call cut off." The rest is a blur of terrible memories: the fire on the sixth floor, where his family was trapped, the agonizing wait, the devastating news. "Someone said, 'Sir, they've set the sixth floor on fire.' My family was there! I tried to get to them, but they held me back. My sons... they were just twelve and five. I couldn't breathe." After the siege, when the city began to breathe again, Karambir's personal ordeal truly began. "All the emotions I'd pushed down came flooding back. The Taj... it was where I met Neeti, when I was 23. And it became the place where I lost her, when I was 40. I couldn't even bring myself to see them..." But Karambir found a way to move forward. He returned to the Taj as it was being rebuilt, finding a strange solace in watching it rise again, brick by brick. "It helped me heal, piece by piece." But the sixth floor, his old room... he could never bring himself to go back. "I walked past it many times, but I couldn't go in. How could I?" After a year and a half, when the Taj was restored, he knew his time there was done. He moved on, to Pune, and eventually to the US. "26/11 is always with me," he says. "But by choosing to move forward, I'm overcoming it, every day." Karambir's story is more than just a tragedy; it's a testament to the strength of the human spirit. He lost everything, yet he continues to serve, to lead, to inspire. His story is a powerful reminder of the true meaning of hospitality, a reminder that even in the face of unimaginable darkness, courage, resilience, and the spirit of service can prevail. He's a true legend, not just of Indian hospitality, but of human strength.
